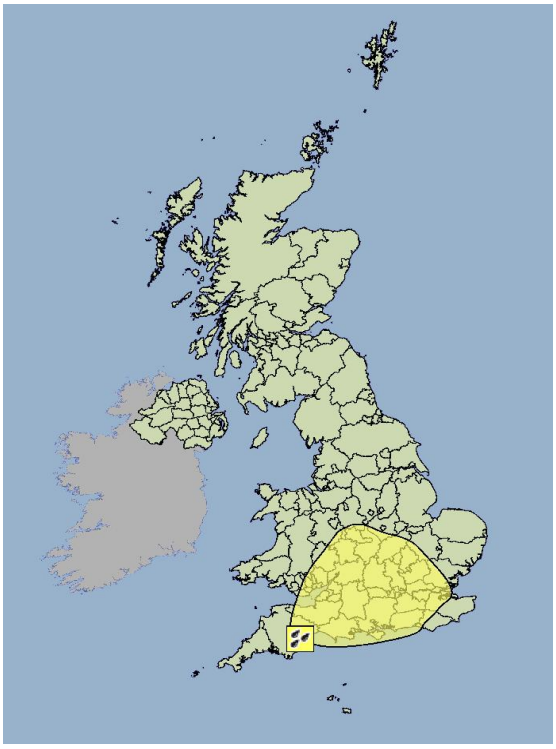
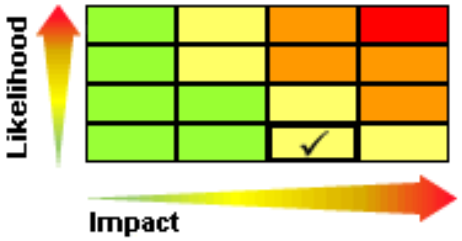
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Isolated thunderstorms may break out later this afternoon and through the evening. Some locations could see 30-40 mm in an hour, bringing the possibility of flash flooding, particularly in urban areas, and lightning could cause disruption to power supplies. The main risk period is during the late afternoon and evening.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 15:00 on Thu, 15th Sep 2016 until 23:50 on Thu, 15th Sep 2016

Slow-moving thunderstorms may develop later today, leading to locally torrential downpours with the risk of hail and frequent lightning.

Please be aware that whilst many places will miss them, there is the risk of flash flooding where they do occur.

This is an update to the Alert issued on Wednesday, to delay the start time by an hour and also to reduce the northward and westward extent whilst increasing the eastern extent of the warning area.
